Davos Exposed: Oligarchs, CEOs, Politicos Facing Heat as World Wakes Up to Great Reset

The annual Davos confab of the globalist elites is getting serious pushback this year. It's getting a lot harder for the World Economic Forum (WEF) and its servile presstitutes in Fake News media to write off their critics as "tin foil hat extremists" and "right-wing conspiracy theorists." From the world's richest man to a rapidly growing throng of bloggers, vloggers, citizen journalists, and independent-media platforms from all parts of the planet and across the political spectrum, the billionaire denizens of Davos are being called out and their toxic command-and-control "masters of the universe" schemes are being exposed.

Elon Musk, the new owner of Twitter, tweeted out a pointed barb aimed at the Davos cabal on January 18. Refreshingly candid and accurate for a leading CEO, it read, "WEF is increasingly becoming an unelected world government that the people never asked for and don't want"

The maverick entrepreneur's comment quickly garnered 10.8 million views, 49.4 thousand retweets, 3,683 quote tweets, 231.4 thousand likes, and 11.8 thousand replies (mostly positive, with many including videos and memes blasting WEF chief Klaus Schwab).

Musk then posed a simple survey: "The World Economic Forum should control the world: Yes or No." With 2,420,521 votes cast, the response was an emphatic 86-percent "NO!"

A few days earlier, on January 15, Musk tweaked Schwab and the WEFers for their ESG (Environment, Social, and Corporate Governance) mandates they are attempting to foist on governments, businesses, media, social media, and individuals. "The S in ESG stands for Satanic," said Musk, who is himself a professed atheist.

Musk has flippantly claimed he didn't go to Davos this year because it would have been boring. The WEF has responded by saying the Tesla/Twitter/SpaceX titan wasn't invited this year. A former darling of Davos (see Musk's many entries on the WEF website here), he is now a pariah to the self-anointed "great and good." He has obviously fallen from grace with the Davos gods for, among other things, breaking up their global media-propaganda monopoly by buying Twitter; exposing their Deep State/media collusion and censorship by releasing the Twitter Files; reinstating thousands of Twitter accounts that had been banned for expressing Covid vaccine skepticism, belief in election fraud, and other politically incorrect viewpoints; challenging the WEF's false overpopulation narrative; endorsing Florida Governor Ron DeSantis for president in 2024; and much more.

Hmmm. Doesn't sound like the WEFers are truly committed to "diversity," does it? You know, as in their "Diversity, Equity, Inclusion" (DEI) agenda that they have been aggressively promoting in hundreds of speeches, reports, programs, videos, articles, and op-eds for the past several years. But, like ESG, DEI is simply another globalist tool to be used to fasten a Chinese communist-style "social credit" system upon humanity. Like the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), WEFers don't apply ESG or DEI to themselves. ESG, DEI, WEF, CCP: the three-letter acronyms fit comfortably in each other's company — and millions of awakening souls around the world are catching on to the Orwellian scheme embedded in them.

Elon Musk may now be a WEF outcast, but he has a big megaphone and a big following. And he's far from alone when it comes to challenging the Davos Borg. Resistance is not futile, as the Davos plutocrats found out this week when they were besieged by reporters and camera crews asking uncomfortable questions whenever they ventured out of their secretive and closely guarded meetings. Ezra Levant and his multinational crew from Rebel News doggedly followed any WEFer who strayed beyond the security perimeter. Pfizer CEO Albert Bourla was one of the miscreants who got hounded non-stop by the Rebel News crew when he decided to take a leisurely walk through the village. Levant and Avi Yemini relentlessly peppered Bourla, demanding to know why he lied about the efficacy of the Pfizer COVID "vaccine," if he is concerned about the victims suffering side effects and dying from the vaccine, and how much money he has made personally from the vaccine and boosters.

Similarly, as the video below shows, Levant put Georgia's Republican Governor Brian Kemp on the spot, and like Bourla, Kemp stonewalled.

Callum Smiles of Rebel News pummeled Wall Street Journal writer Gerard Baker with questions about apparent conflicts of interest with major media outlets' cozy relationship with the WEF. Baker insisted that from his perspective, the WEF conference is just a bunch of people getting together to talk — nothing extraordinary.

Rebel News' Avi Yemini got a much icier reception from CNBC's vice president and international managing editor Patrick Allen. Yemini and his cameraman approached Allen as he stood on the public sidewalk smoking a cigarette outside CNBC's temporary pavilion in Davos. Allen belligerently told Yemini to leave and grabbed his microphone and threatened to "punch" him out.

Larry Fink, billionaire CEO of predatory behemoth BlackRock and a member of the WEF board of trustees, evaded Rebel News ambushes but Ezra Levant did visit the BlackRock Davos pavilion and provided a profile of Fink nonetheless, employing videos of Fink's recent interviews.

asking questions and giving daily commentary to media back in the United States.

Japanese journalist Masako Ganaha may have been the only independent reporter to have scored an “interview” with Klaus Schwab.

I encountered Klaus Schwab! And here is what happened.

He is afraid of our resistance!

The Davos Maestro was less than gracious to the diminutive (but heroically persistent) reporter, granting her barely a few words before dismissing her. Nevertheless, Masako Ganaha did great reporting in Davos under difficult circumstances and provided commentary to many media outlets around the world. (See her Twitter feed here.)

Swiss-based Noor Bin Ladin is another independent journo who was on the ground at Davos reporting, interviewing, and providing incisive commentary. (If the name sounds familiar, it’s because her father is Yeslam Bin Ladin, brother to the late Osama Bin Laden. Her mother, Carmen Dufour Bin Ladin, born to a Swiss father and a Persian mother, grew up in Switzerland. Like many other Western women who marry Muslim men, Carmen realized too late she had made a mistake and went through a horrendous ordeal to be able to divorce her husband and leave Saudi Arabia with her four daughters, including Noor). Her Davos reporting and commentary can be followed on Twitter and Gettr.

Andrew Lawton of the Canada-based True North Centre (TNC News) was one of the few independent journalists (and perhaps the only one) to be granted official access inside the WEF confab. While definitely critical of the WEF, he had to be careful to avoid being ejected from the event. (Lawton’s True North reports can be seen here.)

ZeroHedge’s Tyler Durden reported that “Al Gore is testing out his performative Greta mode at the World Economic Forum in Davos this week,” comparing Gore to the snarling, emotive Greta “How DARE you!” Thunberg. Gore “tried to go climate activist beast mode during a Q&A panel,” Durden said, with pathetic results. “His attempt this week to pull off a ‘Greta moment’ and shed his notorious stiffness resulted in an unhinged rant wherein he claimed that carbon emissions and greenhouses gases are trapping ‘as much extra heat as would be released by 600,000 Hiroshima class atomic bombs exploding every single day on the earth.’”

The non-stop, motor-mouthed, ever-entertaining British actor/comedian/activist Russell Brand has been tearing into the WEF and their Great Reset with fierce relish for months — and amassing a following of millions.

And there are many more who could be cited. Fox News even got in on the action with WEF segments or Davos reporters making guest appearances on Tucker Carlson, Laura Ingraham, Jesse Waters, and Maria Bartiromo (a longtime WEF invitee, who reported again from inside Davos).

The takeaway is that The New American is not such a lonely voice anymore; many other alternative media organizations, bloggers, talk show hosts, etc. have grasped, like Elon Musk, that the gameplan of the WEF's Great Reset is to accelerate centralizing and concentrating power into the hands of the UN, the World Bank, the IMF, the World Trade Organization, the World Health Organization, and the WEF-aligned globalist corporations — until they have total control. We are no longer alone in the tinfoil-hat gallery warning about this malevolent New World Order these megalomaniacs envision for all humanity. That is VERY good news. Knowledgeable, informed resistance is GROWING. That is why governors and attorney generals in nearly two dozen states are disinvesting billions of dollars from BlackRock, Citi, Goldman Sachs, Vanguard, and other woke ESG-promoting funds, and/or are pursuing legal action against them. And that is why BlackRock's Larry Fink whined in an interview at Davos with Bloomberg News that the attacks on him and BlackRock are “ugly” and “personal.” That is why Alberta's newly elected Premier Danielle Smith has been able to stand up to Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau (Klaus Schwab's lapdog Young Global Leader) and has ended her province's health-consulting agreement with the WEF.

Resistance to tyranny and would-be tyrants is never futile.
