Doritos Spain Hires “Trans” Pedo to Peddle Chips, Boycott Begins

It appears that Doritos Spain has made the same mistake as Bud Light. It has hired a “transgender girl” to peddle its products, and this one might be a worse pick than the beer brand’s Dylan Mulvaney.

Samantha Hudson hates the traditional family and has mocked rape victims. And, his X feed shows, he fantasizes about sex with little girls. That makes him a pedophile.

And already the boycott has begun.

Another Day, Another Freak Show

The End Wokeness X feed summarized the case against Hudson:

“Doritos just picked Samantha Hudson as their brand ambassador in Spain,” the post says:

Samantha Hudson:

- Admitted to being a pedophile
- Identifies as a non-binary trans girl
- Openly mocked victims of child r*pe
- An advocate for “annihilating, completely destroying, and abolishing the traditional family”

Ian Miles Cheong offered some of Hudson’s notoriously deranged comments.

“Doritos is doubling down on wokeness by hiring Samantha Hudson, a transgender ‘woman’ and self-admitted p*do as its brand ambassador in Spain, resulting in calls for the boycott of the company’s products,” he wrote:

He has expressed a desire to be with 12 year old girls. In addition to her apparent desire for minors, Samantha Hudson has also shown her contempt for women, even women who have been victims of abuse.

“I hate women who are victims of r*pe and who turn to self-help centers to overcome their trauma. What—heavy wh*res,” he wrote. He also assured that “if a minor came to ask me for help because she is being a victim of s*xual harassment, I would spit [in] her face.”

Among other things, Hudson has written that “I cry with laughter with videos of bullying that ends in suicide,” and that “the little ones too ... they deserve pleasure.”

Nice guy.

Doritos is a product of PepsiCo, and has produced a “rainbow” bag of the famous chips for “Pride Month” since 2015.

Boycott Begins

Just after Doritos Spain picked Hudson, who looks about as much like a “girl” as Hulk Hogan, calls for a boycott began.

“A trans/non-binary pedophile advocate for ‘annihilating, completely destroying, and abolishing the traditional family,’” Robby Starbuck wrote on X:

If you eat @Doritos, that’s who you’re supporting. I’m good. Plenty of chips in the aisle who don’t support pedophiles.

Wrote Tired of being politically correct:

Actually, I just went into my cabinet and I had Doritos chips in there, and I just threw them in the trash.

I will never purchase them again nor will they be allowed in my home.

“Thank you for bringing attention to this. I’m done with them too,” 1776Forever wrote.

“Time to give Doritos the Bud Light treatment,” Fed Up Kentuckian opined.

Spanish patriot Arturo Villa, with more than 43,000 followers, also called for a boycott.

“I’ll never buy a Doritos again neither anyone in my family, I’m disgusted because of this guy you hired,” X user ttyx wrote over Hudson’s disgusting posts. “Everyone should do the same to never buy a Doritos again.”

Bud Light’s Tranny Disaster

The company’s decision to hire a “transgender” spokesman — and one who has openly advocated sex with minors and openly reveled in the suicide of bullying victims — is mystifying, particularly given what happened to the sales of Bud Light.

After Anheuser-Busch introduced Mulvaney, yet another “influencer” who masquerades as a woman, sales tanked. The company introduced a can in April last year to mark Mulvaney’s “365 days of girlhood.”

By August, revenues had dropped $395 million.

In some places, Bud Light was cheaper than bottled water, and at least at one store was almost 30 percent of the price of competitor Miller Lite, $8.99 versus $24.99 for a 30-pack.

And the brand still hasn't recovered, Fox News reported in January. Sales were down 29.9 percent, and the brewery's Budweiser label lost 15 percent.

Meanwhile, "Molson-Coors' Coors Light saw 12.2% sales growth, while Miller Lite sales rose 6.9%, and Yuengling Light soared by 72.3%."

The company's vice president for marketing, Alissa Heinerscheid, said the company had to update its "fratty" and "out of touch" brand with an "inclusive" update — inclusive being leftist code for "how can we hurl a pie in the face of normal Americans." Bud Light drinkers did not agree.

It appears that the bright lights at PepsiCo think the same thing, but want to take "inclusivity" a step further by hiring someone none of the company's executives or other employees would let near their kids.
