Muslim Gangs Rape British Girls While Authorities Know but Do Nothing, Says MP Report

A new report spearheaded by a British lawmaker corroborates in shocking detail long-standing allegations that gangs of Muslim men have been raping native Britons while authorities have known and largely ignored it. "The true horror of what took place is no longer hidden," the report announces.

The Report

Parliamentary member Rupert Lowe led a team that produced the recently released, 200-plus-page "Rape Gang Inquiry Report." Lowe calls the findings a "demonic chapter in Britain's history," a "rotting stain on our country's history," and "one of the most horrendous failures in the history of the country." This "evil" is still happening, he says in the report.

The report, which disregards "political correctness and cultural sensitivities," was funded by 20,000 Brits, and is independent of the one being put together by the British government. Critics have accused the British government of dragging its feet on its rape gang report and attempting to suppress the cultural component when it comes to investigating a problem that is widely recognized in the U.K.

Lowe's report alleges "the systematic targeting of vulnerable girls, overwhelmingly White British, by predominantly Muslim Pakistani gangs across towns and cities up and down the nation." It describes an elaborate and devilish system designed for maximum exploitation:

Organised networks of perpetrators built coordinated operations that transported victims between locations, supplied them with drugs and alcohol, recorded abuse for distribution and blackmail, and passed girls between multiple adult men.

Muslim Crime

The predators have targeted girls as young as 11. They started the grooming process by giving the girls alcohol, drugs, and cigarettes. After a few months, they began picking them up from "school gates, care homes, and streets in taxis." Then the girls were "taken to houses, flats, restaurants, and hotels where they were raped repeatedly by groups of men, tortured, filmed for blackmail, and told they were 'white trash' or 'kuffar' who merited punishment." Survivors told the inquiry team that they were raped daily, even trafficked between cities. Some were shipped to the Middle East, "where they would endure Islamic marriage."

This happened throughout nearly half the country, in “at least 149 local authority districts — close to 40% of all such districts across the United Kingdom,” according to the report. And it has been going on for more than half a century. “These crimes have been committed for decades, since the 1950s by Pakistanis in particular, and have affected every region of our nation.”

The number of crimes committed is “staggering.” The report alleges:

It has been previously established that, at the very least, 250,000 young white girls have been subjected to repeated rape, gang rape, trafficking, torture, pregnancy, forced Islamic conversion, and lifelong trauma. The true number is probably higher.

The report makes no effort to look away from the glaring ethnic and religious pattern among the predators. “In court records and official inquiries, around 87% of those convicted in these group-based child sexual exploitation (‘CSE’) cases bore distinctively Muslim names.” It gets worse: “The vast majority of men involved in these gangs were not convicted.” The report elaborates:

Dr. Taj Hargey, an imam with the Oxford Islamic Congregation, believes the true proportion of gang members who are Muslims to be around 95%. This figure far exceeds the Muslim share of the overall United Kingdom population. The overwhelming majority of the rape gang networks consisted entirely of men from Muslim backgrounds — predominantly of Pakistani heritage, although smaller groups from Somali, Iranian, Syrian, Turkish, and other Muslim origins were also involved.

Leaders Knew but Did Nothing

It only gets worse. The people in charge knew this was happening. “Rape gangs operated with either the active or passive consent of public authorities,” says the report. This “had long been known but repeatedly denied by many in the political class.” As we mentioned earlier, the British government is conducting its own inquiry, which reinforces the legitimacy of these allegations.

And it wasn’t just the political class who turned a blind eye. The report makes the astounding claim that Britain’s institutions also did so:

Police forces ignored repeated reports, criminalised victims instead of perpetrators, destroyed evidence, and allowed known rapists to walk free on bail. Social care services undermined protective parents, placed children in trafficking hubs inside children’s homes, closed cases despite clear indicators of exploitation, and retaliated against whistleblowers. The NHS recorded genital injuries, multiple sexually transmitted infections in children as young as 13, pregnancies caused by rape, and suicide attempts, yet discharged victims back to their abusers without safeguarding referrals or trauma care. Schools observed older men collecting girls at the gates, heard disclosures of rape on school premises, and responded by excluding victims rather than protecting them. Taxi licensing authorities renewed permits for drivers who formed the logistical backbone of the networks and collapsed in the face of organised protests when basic safety measures were proposed.

The report relied on survivors, but “politicians, whistleblowers, experts, family members, and many others came forward.” Moreover:

Parents and carers described their experiences. Instances of pregnancy, abortion, and children born of rape were laid bare. Whistleblowers who had previously been ignored gave evidence. Policing and justice failures were documented. Social care, NHS services (including sexual health and mental health), education, taxi licensing, demographic trends, cultural and social issues, and ideological obstructions to justice were all scrutinised without restriction. Nothing was off the table.

Both the Labour and Conservative parties knew, and did nothing. But Labour has been especially complicit, Lowe alleges. “Labour-dominated councils and MPs were briefed on the gangs long ago yet later denied knowledge,” we are told. As for the Conservatives, they “continued with Labour’s approach and failed to impose mandatory ethnicity recording or launch a full statutory inquiry despite clear evidence from Rotherham [in South Yorkshire] and elsewhere.”

The following sentence summarizes the tragedy of what has happened: “The perpetrators operated with impunity because the state enabled them.”

Root Cause

Lowe and his team pull no punches when it comes to identifying the main source of these crimes. “The root cause was immigration, beginning with the British Nationality Act 1948 and escalating under Tony Blair from 1997 onwards,” he says. The report elaborates, emphasizing the suicidal foolishness of mass migration and the political cudgel of “racism” that’s used to silence commonsense complaints:

Believing proud nations to be responsible for the mid-20th century destruction of Europe, our post-war leaders embraced diversity and multiculturalism as the supposedly civilised alternative. This report establishes beyond any doubt that this “open society” obsession has in fact enabled untold barbarism of its own. Oil and water do not mix and cultural differences, going back centuries, are the genesis of this problem.

So what is the solution?

Deportation is among the proposed answers to this catastrophe. “Every foreign national convicted of group-based [pedophilia] must at the very least be deported.” Also:

Any British citizen convicted of these offences who holds dual nationality must lose their citizenship automatically upon conviction, rendering them liable for deportation. This ought to apply retrospectively to those convicted in the past, too.

The report also suggests “considerable changes to our criminal justice system,” as well as legislation targeting pedophilic gangs, harsher sentences for predators, accountability for institutions that accommodate these crimes, and other measures.

What about the leadership class that sat by and indirectly permitted this evil rape network to operate for so long? The authors of the report say they plan to “identify those responsible in Parliament, and begin civil and private legal actions to ensure maximal accountability.”

As of this writing, there has been no response from Prime Minister Keir Starmer. In the past, he has downplayed these allegations. He has accused people who complained about rape gangs of hopping on the “far-right bandwagon.” Victims have already resigned from government-sanctioned inquiry panels over concerns that they weren’t being taken seriously, according to reports.

Weapon of Mass Migration

The British people are irate over the destructive impact of mass migration. Over the last few weeks, they’ve shown up in droves to protest mass migration and migrant violence. Over in Belfast, masked men of Northern Ireland took matters into their own hands. They attacked apartments where migrants live and incinerated cars on the street. They also clashed with authorities.

U.K. politicians have promised to reduce migration. And, according to the government, they have delivered. Starmer claims that “net migration” has dropped by 82 percent. But the migrants keep coming. Nigel Farage, leader of the Reform Party, posted a video just on Wednesday of 700 migrants, all young men from the Middle East, arriving in England on boats. Oxford University’s Migration Observatory website says the decrease in the number of migrants coming by boat is 13 percent, noting that “around 36,000 people arrived by small boat in the year ending 31 May 2026.”

Mass migration is a weapon the globalists have deployed against wealthy, majority-white Western countries. And the aim couldn’t be more obvious: to destroy those civilizations and make them into something else. The people finally realize their leaders have betrayed them, as so far there seems to be no remorse from the political class. What happens next in a country where vigilante justice has already broken out?
