Rio+20 Report: UN Global Agenda Becoming Increasingly Obvious (Video)

From his vantage point at the United Nations' Rio+20 sustainability summit in Rio de Janeiro, The New American's foreign correspondent Alex Newman notes that the global environmental agenda "is becoming increasingly clear" — from reducing the world's population and spreading abortion worldwide, to gaining more control over the economy and more power to allocate resources.

This report includes interview snippets with Climate Depot editor Marc Morano, who opposes the UN's ambitious global designs, and former Prime Minister of Norway Gro Harlem Brundtland, who is one the chief agenda drivers behind those designs.
